LOUISIANA'S BAYOU COUNTRY

Born to Be WILD

As you travel the roads of Houma, you'll discover why it's called Louisiana's Bayou Country. Houma is 2,000 square miles of expansive wetlands, dark and mysterious swamps, countless bayous and sprawling salt marshes. Then there are the critters who live there — from ferocious 15-foot alligators and curious nutria to thousands of colorful exotic birds. When you ride in Houma, you'll be traveling through an ever-changing vista of breathtaking beauty and natural wonders.

A Day in PARADISE

Located in the midst of a lush tropical zone, Houma is well known for its extremely mild winters. In fact, the average temperature during January and February can range from a mild low of 50 degrees to a high of 75. October through November, and March through April are the best times to plan your motorcycle adventure in Houma. During these months, rain can be almost nonexistent, temperatures are in the mid-70s, the local flora is in full bloom and the wildlife is on the move.

Life is a HIGHWAY

With over 110 miles of lightly traveled, curving roads, Houma offers the biker many distinctive and diverse routes from which to choose. Take off from downtown and in minutes you'll be touring the coffee-colored bayous, cypress-covered swamps and salt marshes of Houma's famous Cajun countryside.

Travel the backroads and you'll find abundant stretches of winding, curving and, most importantly, empty wetland roads. Roads like Route 57 with no buildings, marked traffic signals or even cars anywhere in sight — it's just you, nature and the road.*

So join us in Houma, less than an hour southwest of New Orleans, for the ride of a lifetime. Just take Highway 90 West to exit 202 and start your adventure in exciting and historic downtown Houma, Louisiana.
